

Sample Answer – About 1 minute

These two activities offer quite different ways of enjoying your free time. Spending time with friends outdoors gives people the chance to socialise and take a break from their daily routine. They might particularly enjoy catching up with each other, sharing a meal and simply making the most of the good weather. Being surrounded by friends can also help people switch off and forget about work or study for a while.

Spending time at home, on the other hand, can be appealing because it allows you to unwind in a peaceful environment. Reading a good book is a great way to escape from everyday pressures and enjoy some time to yourself. Another advantage is that you can relax without having to make plans or stick to a schedule.

Partner's Question

Which of these free-time activities would you prefer?

I'd probably prefer spending time outdoors with friends because I enjoy being around other people. Having said that, staying at home with a good book can be the perfect way to recharge your batteries after a busy week.

Useful Vocabulary in Context

take a break from your daily routine

Going away for the weekend is a great way to take a break from your daily routine.

catch up with someone

I met an old friend for coffee so we could catch up after not seeing each other for months.

make the most of something

We decided to make the most of the sunny weather and spend the whole afternoon outside.

switch off

Listening to music helps me switch off after a stressful day at school.

unwind

Some people like to unwind by watching a film or going for a walk.

everyday pressures

Doing exercise can help people cope with everyday pressures.

recharge your batteries

A quiet weekend at home gives me the chance to recharge my batteries before Monday.