

Sample Answer – About 1 minute

Both pictures show people at work, but the working environments are quite different. While the people in the first picture seem to be working together in an office, the man in the second one appears to be working remotely in a much more relaxed setting.

The office workers may have chosen this way of working because being part of a team allows them to share ideas, solve problems together and get immediate support from their colleagues. By contrast, the man working remotely might value having more freedom and flexibility. He can probably organise his own schedule and work from almost anywhere, which may help him achieve a better work-life balance.

Overall, working in an office seems more suitable for people who enjoy collaborating with others, whereas remote work may appeal more to those who value independence.

Useful Vocabulary in Context

working environment

A positive working environment can make employees feel more motivated.

be part of a team

Some people enjoy being part of a team rather than working independently.

get immediate support

New employees can get immediate support from more experienced colleagues.

freedom and flexibility

Freelance work can offer greater freedom and flexibility than a traditional job.

organise your own schedule

Working independently means you often have to organise your own schedule.

achieve a better work-life balance

Flexible working hours can help employees achieve a better work-life balance.

collaborate with others

Large projects often require people from different departments to collaborate with others.

appeal to someone

Living abroad may appeal to people who enjoy experiencing different cultures.